Israel Is Aloof From Direct Approach To Germany On Reparations

Israel's claim for $1,500,000,000 reparations from Germany was filed with the Big Four powers because the Cabinet has decided against a direct approach to the Germans. The Cabinet is split on the question but a majority has insisted that no negotiations take place between the Jewish state and the German Government.

Even generally held opinion that the Germans will discuss only a general reparations settlement, as distinct from individual restitution and indemnification claims, on a most formal basis has not swayed this Cabinet majority. Nor does the argument that Israel desperately needs the money and goods she might obtain in a general settlement.

There is not much hope that Germany will do anything about general reparations except perhaps under instructions from the Big Four powers, according to the New York Times. Those who favor direct negotiations believe that, at a time when the Germans are being wooed so assiduously by the East and West, it is too late to expect such instructions to be given by the major powers.

The argument within the country on the question of talking to the Germans on a formal basis tends to run to extremes. But a poll of sixty Israelis stopped at random on the street does not support the vehemently made argument that no Jew in Israel would sanction a move by the Government to negotiate with the Germans on a governmental level.

The question asked of the sixty was this: "Do you believe the Israeli Government should establish diplomatic relations with Germany if this is necessary to collect reparations?"

Affirmative answers came from thirty-two persons. Of the remainder, twenty-five were emphatically against such a move and only three had no opinion. The persons questioned represented a cross-section of the population—newcomers and longtime residents, Europeans, Orientals and native-born. The argument of those favoring the step ran along these general lines:

The Germans should not be allowed to reap further profit from having killed 6,000,000 Jews. To establish relations with Germany would not signify forgiveness nor would it imply friendship for Germany. With Israel in desperate economic straits the Government must take every possible step to raise funds and goods. The Government cannot run the state on an emotional basis.

The argument in reply to this can be summed up as follows:

Direct contact with the Germans for any purpose would be a betrayal of the 6,000,000 who were killed. Those Jews died not in the defense of their material possessions but simply because they were Jews. Meeting the Germans on equal terms might result in ultimately obtaining goods for Israel but it certainly would mean betraying values of far greater importance than money.

Such an attitude is rightly termed emotional, not rational, but this issue cannot be calculated and weighed in practical terms alone and it is one on which the Jews should allow their emotions full outlet. Admitting the very generation of Germans responsible for what happened to the same moral plane as other people is too high a price to pay for any reparations the Germans could be induced to pay.

200,000 Heard Israel Orchestra In 55 Concerts

The American Fund for Israel Institutions held its tenth annual dinner-meeting and concert in New York, at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel in honor of the Israel Philharmonic Orchestra, which has just completed its first American tour. The event also opened a $1,965,000 nation-wide campaign for support of the Fund's sixty-six cultural, educational and social institutions in Israel, including the orchestra.

Edward A. Norman, president and founder of the Fund, told several hundred guests that the activities of his organization's constituent bodies are "constructive and vital to the life of Israel." William Heller, presiding chairman, announced the election of Oscar M. Lazarus, president of Benrus Watch Company, as chairman of the Fund's New York drive, which has a goal of $1,000,000.

Mr. Heller said that the orchestra had played before more than 200,000 persons during fifty-five concerts in forty cities on a 13,000-mile tour. In a message read at the dinner Abba Eban, Israel Ambassador to the United States, said the tour had "forged still another link in the solid chain of deepening friendship between Israel and the United States." He also paid tribute to Dr. Serge Koussevitzky and Leonard Bernstein, "whose magnificent musicianship was an inspiration to the orchestra."

Mr. Norman presented a scroll of honor to the ninety-four-piece orchestra. Other citations were presented to Mr. Bernstein, S. Hurok, tour manager; Isler Solomon, guest conductor; Jan Peerce, Isaac Stern and Jennie Tourel. A citation was forwarded to Dr. Koussevitzky, who is ill.

The musical portion of the ceremonies was featured by the piano solo of Mr. Bernstein. Mr. Bernstein said that "in the conservation of human resources the American Fund beneficiaries address themselves to the whole man, to make him an energetic, living, thinking, skilled human being; an integral working part of the society in which he lives."

Members of the orchestra left for Israel by plane, some one day and some the next.

Jewish Houses Of Worship Are Among Most Modern

More churches and synagogues are now being built in the United States by Catholic, Protestant and Jewish religious groups than ever before in American history, it was said by Harry M. Prince, architectural consultant to the Union of American Hebrew congregations, central organization of Reform Jewry.

Interviewed in his office, 101 Park Avenue, New York, by the New York Herald Tribune, Mr. Prince, who is president of the New York chapter of the American Institute of Architects, said that Jewish groups of all persuasions, Reform, Orthodox and Conservative, are turning in increasing number to contemporary styles of architecture for their temples and synagogues.

Mr. Prince noted that Roman Catholic Churches, in general, follow the traditional Gothic or Renaissance styles of architecture. Protestant churches are tending increasingly toward the contemporary forms, while Jewish houses of worship, architecturally speaking, are among the most modern.

Among the reasons given by Mr. Prince for widespread use of contemporary architecture by Jews were:

The fact that Jews have no homogeneous background, coming as they do from various sections of the world. Russian and Polish Jews brought the Near-Eastern style of mosques and minarets, while German Jews brought the massive styles of their homeland.

Jews as a minority, he said, having no one architectural tradition, and being anxious to integrate themselves into their respective communities, built their synagogues and temples in contemporary style. Thus the first synagogues and temples were built in the approved Colonial style of the times. Subsequently this gave way to the Mid-Victorian baroque.

Another factor which influenced construction of all houses of worship, he said, has been availability of materials and the work which

Lewisohn Left Great Art To Museums

Paintings valued at $1,000,000 were bequeathed to four museums, Princeton University and City College under the will of Sam A. Lewisohn. Mr. Lewisohn, financier, philanthropist and patron of art and music, died at Santa Barbara, Calif., at the age of 66.

In his will drawn November 16, 1948, he directed his executors to set up trusts of $250,000 for each of his four daughters, Marjorie G. Lewisohn and Virginia M. Lewisohn, both of 117 East Seventy-third Street; Mrs. Elizabeth L. Eisenstein, of Eagle Heights, Madison, Wis.; and Mrs. Joan L. Simon, of 174 Sullivan Street.

Mr. Lewisohn left to his widow, Mrs. Margaret Seligman Lewisohn of 115 East Seventy-third Street, all works of art not specifically bequeathed, his residences in New York City, Westchester and Franklin Counties and the life income from his residuary estate with power of appointment over the principal of the trust.

To the Metropolitan Museum of Art, of which Mr. Lewisohn was a trustee, he bequeathed seven paintings: "The Repast of the Lion," by Henri Rousseau; "An Afternoon on the Island of the Grande Jatte," by Georges Seurat; "La Orana Marie," by Gauguin; "In the Meadow," by Renoir; "Still Life of Apples and Pot of Geraniums," by Cezanne; "The Winding Path," by Maurice Sterne, and "L'Arlesienne," by Van Gogh.

To the Museum of Modern Art, of which Mr. Lewisohn was a vice president and a trustee, he bequeathed three paintings: "The Three Judges," by George Rouault; "The Clown," by Picasso and "The Violin Player," by Ben Shahn. He also bequeathed to the museum his large nude figure of a young girl by Aristide Maillol.

To the Brooklyn Museum of Arts and Sciences, Mr. Lewisohn bequeathed the paintings, "The County Fair," by William Gleckens; the picture of three girls seated, by Jules Pascin, and "The Sacrifice," by Maurice Sterne.

To the National Gallery of Art, Washington, D. C., he left "The Boatmen at Chatou," by Renoir; "Mending the Harness," by Albert Ryder, and "The Bathers," by Gauguin. To Princeton University went the painting called "St. Francis and the Skull," by El Greco.

City College received a painting of the decedent's father, Adolph Lewisohn, by Harrington Mann, with the request that it be installed in the Adolph Lewisohn House, says the New York Times.

Mr. Lewisohn bequeathed legacies of $5,000 each to the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies of New York, the Public Education Association, the Stadium Concerts, Inc., and $2,500 to the New York Association for Jewish Children.

He also left specific cash bequests to business associates and employees. He named as his executors his wife, David M. Heyman, John G. Greenburgh and Eustace Seligman, who are also trustees of the estate.

Set Up Charity Fund In His Family

Samuel E. Bernstein, of New York, founder and chairman of the executive committee of the National Silver Company, one of the largest family enterprises in the silver and cutlery field, died of a cerebral hemorrhage at his winter residence in Miami, Florida, after a month's illness. He would have been 82 years old in a few days.

Mr. Bernstein's career was an immigrant's rags-to-riches success story. He came to the U. S. alone at the age of 13 from his birthplace in Kovno, Lithuania. An uncle, who had sent for him, gave him a few dollars and told him to shift for himself.

Having had only an elementary school education in his native land, he supported himself for three years as a peddler and later found employment as a clerk in a housewares store. Then, in quick succession, he tried his hand at stove manufacturing, forming a company of his own; a retail house furnishings business, which he operated with a partner, and as a wholesaler in house furnishings.

In 1890, Mr. Bernstein started an importing and wholesaling silver company that grew, under his leadership, into the present manufacturing concern. From its original location in Brooklyn, the com-

Labor Leaders Ask U. N. Inquiry Into "Cultural Genocide" By Soviet

A delegation of labor leaders charged that persons of the Jewish faith in the Soviet Union and its satellites were subjected to "cultural and spiritual genocide." The delegation made the charges in petitioning the United Nations Human Rights Division to conduct a public investigation into the charges and to use all possible means to recover for the remaining Jews within the Soviet Union and its satellites the right to live in dignity, security and peace.

In the delegation, which visited United Nations headquarters were David Dubinsky, president of the International Ladies Garment Workers Union -- A. F. L.; Jacob Potofsky, president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America—C. I. O.; Joseph Baskin, general secretary of The Workmen's Circle, Jewish labor fraternal order, and Adolph Held, chairman of the Jewish Labor Committee.

Protesting that a "pogrom" was being executed on the Jewish people in the Soviet Union and its satellites, the delegation declared:

"In Soviet Russia today there are only a few shreds of Jewish cultural and spiritual life remaining. In the other countries under its domination, the process is rapidly approaching a similar state.

"All Jewish institutions—schools, literature, press, theatre, publishing houses, community and charity organizations, synagogues and religious observances, the Yiddish and Hebrew languages—the whole pattern of a once vibrant and creative culture—are rapidly approaching final obliteration.

"We charge that the Soviet campaigns to blot out Jewish cultural life and Jewish identity are brutal and uncivilized breaches of the United Nations Charter, of the Covenant of Human Rights, and of the genocide convention. We appeal to the conscience of humanity to intervene in time and terminate this genocide."

The delegation visited Dr. Egon Schwelb, director of the Human Rights Division, and presented its protest and petition orally and in writing. Dr. Schwelb received the petition without comment. By its action, the delegation laid the groundwork for raising the question at the next meeting of the Human Rights Commission, which will open on April 10 in Geneva, says the New York Times.

The International Confederation of Free Trade Unions, which has Category A consultative status with the Economic and Social Council and, therefore, the right to raise such issues in functional bodies of the council, will press the issue at the meeting of the commission. In this, it was understood, it will have the support of several sympathetic delegates.

The delegation presented a seventeen-page memorandum in support of its charges that asserted that the Soviet Union had withheld information on how many Jews survive there, on the forceful uprooting of Jews and other minorities from places where they had lived for centuries and their banishment to far away regions; and on the present situation of Birobidjan, the Jewish autonomous region; and of Jewish agricultural colonies in the Ukraine and Crimea, says the New York Times.

National Conference For Israel, Set On Permanent Basis, Asks $5,250,000 Of Canadian Jewry

Canadian Jewry was called upon by Samuel Bronfman, national president of the Canadian Jewish Congress, for "one mighty effort" to help rescue thousands of Jews held as "virtual hostages" in Moslem countries, and resettle them in Israel, at the National Conference for Israel and Jewish Rehabilitation at the Mount Royal Hotel, in Montreal.

The Conference launched the Montreal drive of the United Israel Appeal under the chairmanship of Moe Levitt and received pledges from Jewish citizens and communities across Canada indicating that the national quota of $5,250,000 will be fulfilled.

Samuel Bronfman, chairman of the Conference, was presented with a gold medal on behalf of the Jewish community of Canada by Edward E. Gelber, of Toronto, who expressed appreciation of Mr. Bronfman's leadership.

Mr. Bronfman said there were thousands of Jews in transient camps in Israel who had found a homeland, but had not been able to find a home. There were thousands of others in Moslem countries and Europe who must be brought to Israel or be doomed to "persecution, if not extinction."

"The Arab-Israel war served to throw an alarming light on almost 1,000,000 Jews in Moslem lands," he said. "These Jews cannot be considered otherwise than as hostages against whom their oppressors may, at any moment, wreak vengeance for the frustration they suffered in Israel."

Representatives of major Jewish social service and relief organizations from all parts of Canada were among the 600 who attended the three-day conference convened by Mr. Bronfman to discuss details of Canadian participation in the relief and resettlement project initiated in the United States last September.

The entire project, Mr. Bronfman explained, involved three duties on the part of Jewish communities. First there is the "gift dollar" for relief and resettlement. Unless Israel receives help, settling the thousands of victims of persecution, internal difficulties may crush the new state where Arab armies could not, he said.

Trade must be developed, Mr. Bronfman said. If businessmen would help Israel import raw materials and manufactured goods from Canada, they would be making a major contribution to the economic strength of both countries.

Private investment was the third way of helping Israel, Mr. Bronfman concluded. This could be done by direct personal investment corporations.

"Today there are in Israel numerous transient camps filled with thousands of refugees who, having found a homeland, have not yet found a home," he said. After 10 years of Europe's camps, they continue in Israel in a condition of suspended animation.

"The government is faced with a dilemma: either to slam tight the doors of immigration and thus doom thousands to persecution, if not extinction, or to keep these doors unreservedly open and thus impose upon the whole of Israel suffocating and perilous strictures. It is a dilemma which is not for Israel alone to resolve. Here lies our responsibility. Here lies our duty.

"The need for tractors may not be as exciting as that for tanks, for seeds not so dramatic as that for bullets, but without these sinews of a properly functioning economic body, internal difficulty may crush where the Arab armies could not.

"After gift dollars come the development of trade and the export of necessities on a commercial long-term credit basis. If Israel could import from Canada large quantities of wheat, linseed oil, housing materials, aluminum, seeds, sewing machines, roadmaking equipment, lumber and other products, some of the constrictions of the present famine of foreign exchange would be lessened.

"There is yet a third way of playing our part and that is by private investment in Israeli commerce and industry. This can be done by direct personal investment or by investing in private investment corporations such as the Palestine Economic Corporation or the Canadian Palestine Economic Corporation."

Israel could ease some of her economic problems by closing her doors to immigration, said Avraham Harman, director, Israel Office of Information, New York. This she could never do, so the country needed help to absorb thousands of penniless refugees, Mr. Harman declared.

The State of Israel in the past two and one-half years has withstood "the greatest shock of any economic unit in the history of mankind," Hon. Abba Eban, Israel Ambassador to the United States said.

Main speaker at the dinner meeting of the Conference, Mr. Eban said that since Israel became a state the 650,000 original inhabitants had absorbed an additional 610,000 refugees which was equivalent to Canada's absorbing 13,000,000 extra people in two and one-half years without major dislocation of her way of life.

"And yet, people shake their heads over our problems and say how poorly we are doing," he said. "It is as if a man were run over by a steam-roller and when he staggered to his feet his friends, instead of being amazed at his vitality, complained because his clothes were dusty or torn."

The new state had underestimated the scale of the problem, he admitted. Requests to admit more immigrants poured in from all sides — even Great Britain had asked Israel to take in Iran Jews. Jews who for centuries had lived in misery and oppression in Arab countries were rushing "like a great tide" upon the shores of Israel, and that country was committed by the very reason of its existence to receive and succor them. Its population will have been boosted 200 per cent by the end of 1954, he said.

Vast immigration is the real cause of the financial and economic crisis of Israel because in the past two years the major financial burden of this immigration was on the shoulders of the Israeli Government, Dr. Nahum Goldmann, chairman of the American Section of the Jewish Agency for Palestine, said at the close of the National Conference for Israel and Jewish Rehabilitation.

The only way this can be solved, said Dr. Goldmann, is by greater contributions from Jews of the world to help Israel absorb the colossal cost of this immigration.

In his analysis of the situation, Dr. Goldmann said that Israel has had no time to solve any of its fundamental problems. Its main external problem, he said, is peace with the Arabs.

"The situation is worse than

Frema Engel, niece of the bride, as flower girl, wore a floor-length hooped dress of rose-coloured taffeta; with a matching poke bonnet; and carried a nosegay. The groom was given in marriage by his father, S. Wisenthal, and a cousin, Mrs. R. Garmaise. Jack Kanofsky was best man. David Engel, nephew of the bride, in full dress, was page boy. Ferns and variegated flowers decorated the synagogue, and the aisle was adorned with white ribbon. "Because" was sung. Following the ceremony, a reception took place in the hall of the synagogue. Man, 83, Reunited With Daughters After 50 Years, And Nazi Terror

A news story of five and a half years ago reporting that twenty-two out of 30,000 Jews had survived the Nazi terror in the Polish town of Slonim, led to the reunion in New York of a man of eighty-three with two daughters whom he had not seen since they were babies fifty years ago.

Alter Yelsky, a retired New York garment worker, met his daughters, a son-in-law and a grandchild at the Hebrew Immigrant Aid Society, 425 Lafayette Street. A diabetic, he was not strong enough to meet them at the pier. By way of identification he had brought along a photograph, a copy of which he had sent to Poland soon after he came to the U. S. in 1900. His daughters, Mrs. Raphael Trokinski, fifty-one, and Mrs. Sonia Ceitlin, fifty-seven, were speechless with emotion.

Mrs. Phineas Salmon, wife of a physician, in whose home at 124 Henry Street Mr. Yelsky lives, and who was born in the Yelsky home in Slonim, said that she had brought him late in 1945 to the H. I. A. S. office with a copy of the newspaper clipping. A check showed that his two daughters had been among the twenty-two survivors and were then in a displaced-persons camp at Lechfeld, Germany, says the New York Herald Tribune.

The Salmons were willing to sponsor the daughters' entry into America. A year ago when it was finally possible, their departure was delayed by the marriage of Mr. Yelsky's younger daughter Ryfka to Mr. Trokinski, an optician, in the D. P. camp.

Mr. Yelsky, who is still straight of figure and speaks only Yiddish and Polish, had prayed that he might live long enough to see his family, Mrs. Salmon said. A year and a half ago Dr. Salmon, who grew up with Mr. Yelsky in Slonim, had given him only six months to live. The night before the ship's arrival he was so excited that he had to be given a sedative.

The two women showed no signs of the strain of having been hidden away from the Nazis for six years on the farm of one Christian after another. Mrs. Ceitlin had lost her husband and younger daughter to the Nazis. She escaped with Cipora, now a bright-eyed girl of fourteen, who was fitted out for the voyage in a slack suit complete with binoculars.

Mrs. Salmon explained that Mr. Yelsky would have brought his family to the U. S. long before the war if his wife had chosen to make the trip. She too was killed by the Nazis.

Mr. and Mrs. Trokinski will live at the H. I. A. S. shelter until an apartment is found for them and he is registered in an optician's school.

Mr. and Mrs. David Alter, 226 Oakwood Avenue, brother and sister-in-law of the bride, gave her in marriage. She wore a white satin gown, fashioned with nylon inset at the neckline, and long sleeves; and a hoop-skirt, with a bustle-back, that shaped into a train. A net Juliet cap, trimmed with seed-pearl beads, held her tulle-illusion fingertip veil. She carried a white Bible, adorned with a white orchid. Miss Marsha Cohen, sister of the groom, was maid of honour, in a pastel-blue, strapless, brocaded satin gown, with matching jacket. She had a matching crown headdress; and carried a bouquet of American Beauty roses. Archie Klians, of Montreal, Que., was best man. White snapdragons, and carnations decorated the canopy. For the trip to Buffalo, N.Y., the bride wore a wine-coloured gabardine suit, with navy-blue accessories; and a white orchid corsage. They are residing at 780 Shaw Street. Out-of-town guests were: Mr. and Mrs. Mannie Alter, Mr. and Mrs. M. Alter, of Dunnville; Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Cohen, Mr. and Mrs. W. Soon the sap will be running, ushering in another season of maple syrup. During the last few years a considerable amount of table syrup has been offered to individuals and stores by unscrupulous pedlars as maple syrup. Frequently the containers bear labels with false names and addresses. Department of Agriculture officials caution that the best way to buy maple syrup is from your regular store or a pedlar from whom you have bought before and who has a reputation for honest dealing. If you have any doubts about the syrup you buy, make a note of the pedlar's truck or motor car licence number and jot down the date of purchase. Then if the syrup is found to be imitation, the Department of Agriculture has some chance of tracing the seller and prosecuting under the Maple Products Industry Act.

We like to go visiting to see how other people produce textiles. A good many come to visit us, and we like this too. All main countries have textile industries, and people come from other countries in the western group to study our methods. The textile industry here in Canada is among the leaders in technical skill and effectiveness. And along with the U.S. it pays the highest wages for textile employment anywhere. In Canada the industry is the largest employer of manufacturing labor. Textiles also pay the largest manufacturing wage bill in this country. In these times, the size and technical ability of the industry are important features of Canada's strength.

The Shortage Of Jewish Foster Homes: A State Of Emergency

The Jewish Family and Child Service of Toronto must find foster homes for Jewish children, says Miss Dora Wilensky, director of the agency. The present shortage of Jewish foster homes is a state of emergency.

It is not charity that the Service asks for these children. If it were merely a matter of money, the generous Jewish community of Toronto would not permit one child to be in want. It is something far less tangible — and far more important. It is a place in a real home, with all that a home means, love, security, the feeling of being wanted, the chance to grow up and develop normally that only a home can provide.

There is an even deeper reason why Jewish foster homes are needed. Due to the shortage of such homes, a number of Jewish children have had to be placed in non-Jewish care. It is true that they are receiving kindly attention and guidance, but they are obviously being deprived of the Jewish culture and background to which they are entitled.

The Agency believes there are a number of reasons for the shortage of foster homes. The most hopeful reason — and the most easily remedied — is that a number of families able and willing to give a child foster care simply do not realize that the need, the opportunity, exists. If such persons will call the Jewish Family and Child Service, 179 Beverley Street, PLaza 5931, a case worker will gladly explain the details and requirements.

Another reason is that potential foster-parents are unwilling to bear the thought of raising children, growing to love them as their own, and then inevitably to lose them. "That is a real emotional problem", Miss Wilensky admits, "but hundreds of foster parents have been able to make the adjustment, which is frequently not as difficult as the foster parent fears."

She cited the example of Mrs. Sharpe, who took into her home two motherless little girls, aged one and five years. After some years, the girls' father remarried and was able to make a home for them. It was a wrench to the Sharpes — but during the years Mrs. Sharpe had periodically reminded the girls — and herself — as casually and matter-of-factly as possible, that some day they would return to share their father's home with a new mother.

Nevertheless, her emotion betrayed itself when the time of parting came. The girls comforted her. "We'll learn to love our new mamma", they said, "but she'll never take your place. You'll see us often." Besides, they reminded her, when her own children had grown up they had left home, they still remained her children. Later Mrs. Sharpe confided to a Service social worker that "it had been worth it."

There is still another reason why foster homes are difficult to find. The housing shortage has meant that families are often occupying less living space, and high rents can be obtained for such rooms as are available. However, as has been said, no financial sacrifice is asked or expected of foster parents They are asked to give only of themselves, of their love. The Jewish agency, a member of the Red Feather Community Chest, pays a substantial board and lodging allowance, plus clothing and spending money, and makes arrangements for medical and dental care. Moreover, a trained social worker is available at all times for consultation should any problems arise.

The foster parents need not be rich, nor highly educated, nor live in a large or palatial home. They may be a childless couple, or with children of their own. In fact, many foster parents have remarked that their own children were greatly benefitted by sharing their home with children who had no home of their own.

But above all, foster parents have the abiding satisfaction of providing something neither money nor the most advanced social science can provide — a home, the only good environment in which a child can grow to normal manhood and womanhood. And they have heeded the words of the Talmud:

"He who is responsible for the saving of a simple life in Israel, it is as if he saves an entire world. The world is only saved by the breath of children."

Not only does its evidence point "to a deliberate and official anti-Semitism" in the Soviet Union, but it shows that the same policy of liquidating the Jewish community is being applied to 60,000 to 70,000 in Poland, 350,000 in Rumania, 200,000 in Czechoslovakia and 20,000 in Hungary, the delegation charged.

those materials could do. Thus, heavy stone, he said, lent itself to Gothic and Renaissance architecture.

Traditionally churches and synagogues were much larger than other buildings in the community, reflecting the importance of religious institutions, which dominated many aspects of life, he explained.

Now, he said, the problem is to build houses of worship which express outwardly their purpose, while at the same time not having them completely overshadow all other structures. In the building of modern synagogues and temples, he said, a new danger has arisen, that of making the building so modern it looks like a department store or even an athletic field house.

"In other words", he said, "we must build religious structures whose purpose and function are obvious but which, at the same time, do not overshadow the neighborhood."

Synagogues and temples, he said, should be designed first in line with the purposes to which the building will be put. In the past, he said, when synagogues and temples were built, with the exterior in mind, too often the religious schoolrooms were relegated to basements. Now the interiors of buildings are planned before exteriors are arranged.

"Jews of all shades of opinion are making the strongest effort to break away from the traditional Greek, Roman, Byzantine, Gothic, Renaissance and even Colonial architecture in the construction of synagogues and temples," he said.

"It is my contention that buildings, while they should adopt contemporary styles, still must express the fact that they are religious structures."

NATIONAL CONFERENCE

last year," he declared. "We don't expect the Arabs to make war again, but as long as they don't make peace it will be politically difficult for Israel. The difficulty existing between the East and West is affecting Israel.

"Israel leans to the West because it is a democracy," he said, "but as long as the Western powers have not formulated their policy toward the East, it will mean a problem for Israel. The question of labor and state financing is not settled. Labor is playing a great role but everybody agrees that Israel should not be a socialist state."

The immense problem of amalgamating immigrants from 16 or 20 countries was also cited by the speaker. He said that merging of Oriental Jews, Eastern Jews, North African Jews will take many years.

"Israel should have a number of years to solve this problem; in 2½ years since the birth of the state over 500,000 have been brought in," he declared.

"The colossal immigration may reach 300,000 this year," he declared. Extraordinary efforts had to be made by world Jewry to help Israel absorb these people.

Vice-chairmen of the National Conference include: Michael Garber, K.C., Montreal; E. E. Gelber, Toronto; Ben Sadowski, Toronto; S. E. Schwisberg, K.C., Montreal; and Hyman Grover. Directors are Saul Hayes and Rabbi Jesse Schwartz, both of Montreal.

The meeting decided to set $5,250,000 as the contribution of Canadian Jewry towards the purely relief aspect of an international project seeking to raise $1½ billion for Israel. The money is to be used to bring 600,000 Jews to Israel within the next three years and help Israel become self-supporting.

The national conference, hitherto a provisional body, was set up on a permanent basis under the chairmanship of Samuel Bronfman of Montreal. Headquarters of the organization will be in Montreal.

Commentaries

By Dr. Harry J. Stern, Rabbi

Convert, Apostate, Proselyte

Concluded from Last Week

By the term proselytes, we refer to those non-Jews who embrace Judaism. Ruth, of the Biblical record, was such an adherent to Judaism. In the Roman period of Jewish history we find that Tacitus and Cicero complain of many Roman citizens joining Israel's community. It is said that some of our great Talmudic Rabbis such as Akiba and Shamai and Abtalyon were of non-Jewish origin. Proselytism was therefore common to Israel and the best type of proselyte, according to the Rabbis, was one who came of his own free will, actuated by the highest motives and consequently believing that the doctrines of Judaism are the most spiritual in the world. Thus said Rabbi Simon ben Lakish, "Such are more precious in the sight of God than even Israelites themselves." Proselytes to Judaism were most eagerly welcomed up to the third century of the common era.

But, after the third century, when Christianity became a state religion, the dominant faith penalized those who sought the fellowship of Israel. Churchianity legislated against the heroic and honest proselytes of the non-Jewish community who felt that Judaism was the supreme truth. The anti-Jewish legislation for the past 1,600 years was characterized by prejudice, fanaticism, and ignorance and especially during the Middle Ages when the Jews were so oppressed that hardly anyone cared to cast his lot with the despised, dejected, and rejected Jews.

We Jews feel that the best kind of missionary results are effected by noble living. Our sages have transmitted to us the thought, "The pious of all people have a share in the world to come." Outstanding non-Jews through the centuries took on the faith of our fathers. There was King Bulon, ruler of the Chazars, a nation occupying a large territory in Southern Russia. In a dramatic way, after search and investigation, he became a proselyte to Judaism along with the population of his kingdom which after 250 years became absorbed among the Russian people.

Not only kings but also bishops found their place in the synagogue. We need only mention Bishop Bodo, tenth century spiritual adviser to King Louis the Pious, who renounced Christianity and became a follower of the Law of Moses. He was compelled to leave France in 938 because of this act, and took refuge in Spain. And what a thrilling and heroic conversion was that of the Franciscan monk Diago, whom his companions failed to argue out of the faith of Israel and who in 1603 was burned alive by his fellow-monks to purge from him the sin of espousing the faith of Israel. And when we turn to the seventeenth century we find that noble Jesuit Johann Spaeth, who took the name of Moses Germanus, who became dissatisfied with many Catholic dogmas and even after venturing in Lutheranism, became a devoted son of Israel.

This man, Spaeth, made a profound study of Hebrew and Cabalistic literature and pointed out that much of Christian literature was drawn from Jewish tradition. Spaeth, it seems, did not intend to become a proselyte to Judaism, but a crucifix dropped from his pocket and was picked up by a Jew who said: "It is Israel, the man of Sorrow." From these words he understood the fifty-third chapter of Isaiah: "The Jews bear the sins of the heathen and are daily persecuted by them." Spaeth so loved Hebrew literature that he published a translation of Judah ha-Levi's poem: "Mi Kamoko" into Latin, German and Spanish. He died a worthy son of Israel in 1701.

One of the most recent proselytes to remember is Warder Cresson that religious enthusiast of the city of Philadelphia who was appointed by the United States Government as Consul to Jerusalem, who took on the faith of Israel, defending the cause of Judaism and criticizing the London Society of Christians for the conversions of Jews.

When Cresson took on Judaism his family thought him mentally deranged, and his son Jacob even applied to the courts and obtained a commission in lunacy. Cresson appealed from this decision and soon he was discharged and set free. This proselyte to Judaism married a Sephardic woman on his return to Jerusalem, after the Philadelphia trial, and lived the life of a pious oriental Jew. He even founded an agricultural colony for Jews in Palestine in order to create a haven of refuge for the persecuted Jews of the world. At his death he was buried on the Mount of Olives with such honours as are only paid to a Rabbi in Israel. In our own day the Catholic Palliere, who served as liberal Rabbi in Paris, told of his dramatic pilgrimage from Christianity to Judaism in his memorable work, "The Unknown Sanctuary."

Palliere was the scion of a devoted Catholic family. His mother planned that her son should be consecrated to the priesthood. Therefore, his childhood and youth were devoted to the preparation of that sanctified faith which did not satisfy his spiritual hunger. He soon ventured into Protestantism and after great spiritual combat, Palliere, in his twentieth year became a proselyte to Judaism. His conversion to the faith of Israel came about as a result of his studies in Hebraism and his correspondence with the sainted Rabbi of Leghorn, Italy. Palliere served in the liberal Synagogue of Paris when the Nazis invaded France. Reports have it that he, too, along with all martyrs of Israel, met death in a concentration camp.

The sainted Rabbi Leo Beck who miraculously survived the concentration camp in 1945 called upon leaders in Jewry to engage again in the work of active proselytizing and again at the World Union of Progressive Judaism in 1949 held in London, Dr. Beck re-emphasized the need for taking up the work of proselytizing as did the Jews of Palestine before the rise and establishment of Christianity. There is much in what Dr. Beck has to say but we feel that the mission of example set by the resuscitated Jewish State, which is founded on social justice will to some extent have fulfilled the mission of the Jew to the non-Jewish world.

And what is more the Jew has been a light to the world for both Mohammedanism and Christianity have become missionarized through the Hebrew Bible. We feel that the best active missionary work that we Jews can now do is to conduct a "home mission" and convert the secularists among us who do not know the sources of Jewish inspiration and experience not the joy of Judaism. Our great task is to find self fulfillment through our complete identification with our synagogue life and complement the work of the synagogue by joining all God-believers in the work of justice and righteousness and in helping the despised and the dispossessed of the world.

For Christians, Christianity is the best religion. For Jews, Judaism, is the best religion. Let Christians be the best kind of Christians and let Jews be the best kind of Jews and therein is hope for a decent society. That is in truth the significance of "spiritual democracy".

Reports To J.D.C. On Crisis In Iran

Spring thaws in Iran, Iraq and Afghanistan will loose a flood-tide of tens of thousands of Jews who will take to the roads and begin converging on Teheran on or about April 15 in hope of using that city as a base for emigration to Israel, Stanley Abramovitch, Director in Iran of emigration and relief programs supported through the United Jewish Appeal, reported on his arrival in New York from the Iranian capital. Mr. Abramovitch, who represents the Joint Distribution Committee in Iran and who will make a brief tour of major American communities before he returns to the Middle East, said that American Jews must act swiftly in support of the United Jewish Appeal's nationwide campaign to forestall a major disaster certain to result from the massing of refugees in Teheran, where relief bodies are unable to cope with them.

He said that he had left Teheran hurriedly to consult with officers of the Appeal following the receipt of evidence which showed that Jews throughout Iran and neighboring countries were preparing to trek to the capitol as spring cleared the roads of snow and ice. Mr. Abramovitch said also that a recent rise in anti-Jewish tension in neighboring Iraq would add to the flow of Jews into Iran for immediate safety and eventual movement to Israel. He pointed out in this connection that a mounting number of Jews have come from Iraq in the last several weeks with the approach of that country's May 31 deadline on further Jewish emigration to Israel. He pointed out, too, that the wild, mountainous region of Kurdistan forming the northern barrier of both Iran and Iraq has become a major source of emigrant Jews fleeing to Teheran for movement to Israel.

The visitor, who is in the United States for the first time, said that he feared a Jewish influx into Teheran might lead to serious disturbances unless substantial funds become available at once through the United Jewish Appeal to provide for a swift and orderly mass airlift to Israel. He pointed out that at the present time close to 5,000 Kurdish, Iraqi, Afghanistani, and Iranian Jews are quartered in synagogues, and in makeshift camps in Teheran's two Jewish cemeteries, as they wait for movement to Israel. He said that two Jews are ready to take the place of every one who leaves for Israel, and that his survey indicates this number will rise to three and four by mid-April as a result of the emigration and social crisis in Iraq.

Mr. Abramovitch stressed that the Government of Iran is friendly and sympathetic toward both its Jewish population and Jewish refugees entering the country, and is the only Moslem country in the entire Middle East to maintain cordial relations with the State of Israel. He emphasized that despite the Iranian Government's friendly attitude toward its Jews, a minimum of 30 percent of that country's 90,000 Jews would leave for Israel, if they could, because of "grinding poverty, the lack of economic opportunity and the hopes of a people stirred by the rebirth of Jewish statehood".

Mr. Abramovitch reported that in addition to the Jews of Iran and Iraq arriving in Teheran, there has been a widening flow of Jews from Afghanistan. He said that Jews from Iraq, Afghanistan, and Kurdistan are given priority for movement to Israel in order to avoid an overflow in the Iranian capitol of stateless persons.

Twice a year clothes are distributed to a total of 3,000 school children. The JDC official emphasized, however, that the lack of funds prevents a necessary widening of this feeding and clothing program. He said that increased funds must be made available through the United Jewish Appeal to feed an additional 3,000 needy children, and to clothe an added 6,000 of pre-school and school age. He has been the Joint Distribution Committee's Director in Iran for the past two years. He was first assigned to Munich, Germany, to help in the administration of its relief and rehabilitation program for Displaced Persons. Mr. Abramovich makes his home in London, England, and is a graduate of London University. He was ordained a Rabbi from Jews College in the British capitol.

Israel Protests Release Of Nazis

The profound pain of the Government and the people of Israel at the decision taken by the United States high commissioner for Germany authorizing the commutation and reduction of sentences pronounced by the Nuremburg Military Tribunal on a large number of major war criminals, was expressed by the Minister for Foreign Affairs Moshe Sharett, to the American Ambassador in Israel, Monnett B. Davis. In an aide memoire handed to Mr. Davis, Mr. Sharett referred to the documentary report issued some time ago on this subject by the U. S. High Commissioner in Germany which stressed the "calculated sadism of the crimes perpetrated by war criminals" whose sentences were now being reduced. The victims of these harrowing deeds, which are without precedent in the history of man, were for the most part Jewish men, women, and children slaughtered for no other reason than that they were Jews.

The aide memoire refers to the fact that even the seven death sentences, which American authorities in Germany have no choice but to uphold, have not as yet been carried out and are now subject to renewed appeals. The action taken by Mr. McCloy has, in a large measure, undone the great achievements of the Nuremberg trials which established the principle that there are certain basic rules of morality which no state and no government can disregard with impunity and that individuals found guilty of their violation will be held personally responsible and not permitted to escape on the grounds of "superior orders", Mr. Sharett said.

The Israel Government believes that the action now taken will inevitably be interpreted as having introduced considerations of political expediency into what was regarded as a judicial and humanitarian issue. It was Mr. Sharett's feeling as expressed in the aide memoire, that the deterrent effect of the sentences has been gravely impaired. Mr. Sharett stressed that the Israel Government feels bound to place on record its most anxious concern at what must be regarded as an unjustified and dangerous measure of clemency towards Nazi war criminals.
